RE: COLLEGE OF FELLOWS ELECTION

Enclosed please find a copy of the College of Fellows requisites for nomination and a nomination sheet.

Any AIBD Professional Member may nominate another AIBD Certified Professional Member in good standing for the AIBD College of Fellows. This does not have to go through an AIBD State Society or Chapter. You may nominate someone from another state or another chapter if you think a member is qualified for the College. The College is responsible for controlling the openings available in the College and may induct new members at any time. Therefore, there are no specific deadlines for submitting nominations. All nominations received will be held by the elected jury within the College and will be reviewed from time to time.

Please make this information known to members in your state and distribute the requisites and nomination forms as requested. If you should need additional copies, please contact the national office at (800) 366-AIBD.

The next scheduled induction is August 11, 2017 at the Academy of Medicine at Georgia Tech, Atlanta, GA.

Nominations received on or before July 3, 2017 will be considered for the August 11th induction.

COLLEGE OF FELLOWS

QUALIFYING REQUISITES

FORWARD:

The recognition and stature of building design as a profession has been achieved and continues to develop through the ceaseless and untiring efforts of your Institute and those members elected by you to plan and guide its destiny. We have taken our place among other professions such as architect, engineer, physician, attorney and teacher. Among professional societies, it is a well know and established custom that outstanding ability, or notable contributions reflecting prestige and profound esteem on the profession by an individual member, be recognized and accorded a rank of honor. By distinction befitting the feat accomplished or the person served, and to bear witness to the respect held by all Institute members for that individual's achievement.

REQUISITES:

A guideline has been established to assist you in your evaluation of possible nominee's qualifications, pursuant to elevation to the College of Fellows. The following brief remarks are pertinent to the four eligibility categories listed and established as the basic criteria for all present and future considerations.

(1) In Design of Buildings (Required)

This in itself is self-explanatory and indicates outstanding and notable design of projects and/or buildings for which the nominee has had full responsibility.

(2) In Education

This refers to and denotes an outstanding contribution in teaching of others the art of drawing, design, drafting, and participating in the dissemination of the knowledge of building design or architecture in any of its myriad forms, such as planning and design, specifications, supervision, public relations, project management, administration, quality control, etc. This can be more specifically construed to mean, "Imparting your knowledge to others", and does not include the personal education you have received, citations or degrees held by you from colleges or universities, etc.

(3) In Literature

This refers to published works and writings of importance in relation to the profession of design, or its allied fields. It does not mean short articles of momentary or passing interest, explanations or descriptions of projects, methods or procedures relative to current jobs, but may involve extensive new and/or unique methods or procedures.

(4) In Public Service

This refers to outstanding projects, programs or planned research, all leading toward and contributing to the improvement of, or adding to the professional dignity and stature of the profession or the Institute. This can take varied forms, either all within the Institute or outside the Institute, or a combination of both. It must, in some respect, either directly or indirectly add to the prestige of AIBD.

IN GENERAL:

Elevation to the College of Fellows is not intended, nor will it be conducted on the basis of a popularity contest among members. It should be obvious that popularity alone is not the criterion for judging professional excellence or accomplishments. Neither will regular attendance to meetings alone, nor long and meritorious service to the Institute be considered as sufficient qualifications, for under such measure, probably half of the general membership would qualify. Instead, selection for the College of Fellows will be made after a very thorough and careful review of all the qualifications of the various candidates nominated for that honor. Since membership in the College will be limited to a small percentage of the total Certified Professional Membership, it is very apparent why each candidate must be completely qualified for such elevation.

JUSTIFYING DOCUMENTS:

Documents supporting nominations of a member, including two letters of recommendation, must accompany the application. Any document not sent electronically, faxed or are not readily reproducible, such as photos, etc., shall be provided by nominators in a quantity of three. If original drawings are submitted in support of the design nomination, they shall be submitted in a quantity of three. Any designs considered in the selection process, must be the original work of the nominee.
